It was a magnificent spectacle. Though the gun captains had been cautioned not to waste ammunition, but to fire with deliberation, the fire was so rapid that there was an almost continuous report. The measured crash of the big 18-inch guns of the battle-ships sounded above the rattle of the guns of the secondary batteries like thunder claps above the din of a hurricasse.

heels, for all the world like a genuine

The new military conversation, or rather the host of military phrases, heard these days is exceedingly interesting. A girl returns from some shep-ping expedition. Before the war was started she would have said very simply: "I'll go up and tell mother about it." Now her phrase is. "I'll go and give the countersign to mother." Or, telling a sister to say such and such to her father, she will say, "Report to headquarters."

"Advance into the other room," is the proper way to put it now, and, instead of speaking of going up or down stairs you should say, if you would be really in form nowadays, "I'm going aloft," or "I'm going below."

Betaking one's self to one's downy couch is expressed by the words, "I'm going to turn in," and on the street, when two, or three or four girls are walking together, there are often to be heard these words of command, "Right about facel" and "Forward, march!"

"You may fire When Ready, Gridley."

"You may fire when ready, Gridley."

That phrase of Commodore Dewey's, as the Olympia steaming slowly, was getting the range of her guns on the Spanish fleet, is likely to be long quoted and widely remembered. Surely, says The Criterion, it breathes coolness, care, confidence in the face of an enormous and pressing responsibility. Compare it with the thunder it instantly wakened, the tremendous forces it let loose, the terrible destruction that followed, and you will find it the most typical Americanism of the quarter-century. Mark, too, its politeness, as well as its touch of comradeship.
